Tv guide app for firestick

One of the most amazing features on Amazon's Fire TV device is incredibly easy to overlook. I'm talking about a channel guide where you can browse grid guides for your favorite live TV channels directly from the Fire TV home screen. You don't have to waste time loading apps to see what's going on, or you can build your own meta-guide that covers both streaming and on-air channels. The Amazon Fire TV Stick 4K Channel Guide received a significant upgrade last month with new streaming sources such as Sling TV and YouTube TV, but still doesn't receive noticeable billing on the Fire TV menu system. And to actually get the most out of it, you need to customize exactly the channels that appear in the grid. But if you're in the habit of channel surfing in moments of indecision, it's worth a few minutes to set it all up. Find the Fire TV Channel Guide To access the Fire TV Live TV Guide, scroll down to Turn On Now on the Home tab at the top of the home screen, scroll left, and then click Guides. On the Live tab, scroll down and select Channel Guide. On the Alexa remote control, hold down the microphone button and say Channel Guide or Open Guide. Jared Newman / Scroll left from the Now line on the IDG home screen to see a link to Fire TV's channel guide. You'll see a cable-style grid guide with up to 14 days of programming that you can scroll through, and apps that support Amazon's guides will automatically appear in this menu. Fire TV Channel Guide: The sources and limitations from which apps and streaming services support Fire TV channel guides are complex. If you replace cable bundles with live TV streaming services, most cable bundles should appear in your guide, including AT&T TV Now, Hulu+ Live TV, Philo, Sling TV, and YouTube TV. Jared Newman / IDG Most live TV streaming services can feed into Fire TV's grid guide. A couple of free streaming services - Pluto TV and Red Bull TV - will also integrate with Fire TV's channel guide. The former includes about 50 of the channels you'll find among the actual Pluto TV apps, but it's still a good way to make up for the number of channels you can flip. A handful of premium streaming services can also stream live channels through their guides, including HBO, Cinemax, Showtime, Starz, Epix and PiX. The downside here is that it only appears if you subscribe through Amazon channels, not individual apps. If you sign up directly through the service's app, you can also remove your subscription and sign up again through Amazon to get a live TV integration. (You can use this link to view a list of all Amazon channels that you have already subscribed to.) Perhaps best of all, the Fire TV Channel Guide allows you to view on-air channels if you have an Amazon Fire TV recast DVR or an Amazon Fire TV Edition TV with an antenna connected. That means you can combine antennas on streaming services such as Philo and Sling TV in one comprehensive guide. Jared Newman / IDG Another Fire TV recast box allows you to stream local channels to a Fire TV stick, streaming box, or smart TV. You can also bring antenna channels into Amazon's guides through airTV, a network TV tuner that integrates Sling TV and on-the-air channels. Sling TV works with Amazon's Channel Guide, so you'll also see airTV antenna channels. The Live tab on the Fire TV home screen also shows live content from other sources, such as Twitch, MLB TV (via Amazon Channel) and NBA League Pass (via Amazon Channel). Unfortunately, content from these sources does not appear in the grid guide. Use fire TV channel guides Once you have a source in your Channel Guide, the next step is to bookmark your favorite channels and hide channels you've never seen before. Go to the Live tab on the Fire TV home screen, scroll to the bottom, and then choose Settings. Jared Newman / IDG Select Manage Channels and select one of your TV sources to view the channel list. Jared Newman / IDG Click any channel in this list to add it to your favorites or press Play/Pause to hide it from the guide. Repeat this process for Jared Newman / IDG and all other channel sources. Then go to the Channel Guide and press the menu button on the remote control. If you select Filter Channels from the pop-up menu, you'll see only one favorite or specific source. You can also add channels to your favorites list from this same menu. Jared Newman / IDG In most cases, if you select a channel from the guide, you will be directed to the corresponding app and you will not be allowed to browse Amazon's guides while watching live TV. (An exception to this rule is direct antenna input on Pluto TVs, Fire TV recasts, and Fire TV edition TVs, as it plays directly through Amazon's menu system.) To return to Amazon's guide after selecting a channel, press the back button once or twice. Another caveat: Amazon's Channel Guide recreates cable's channel surfing experience, but doesn't do DVRs to stream TV. To record a live streaming channel, you need to jump into the live TV streaming app and use the DVR feature. Amazon's grid guide is great, but without a more elaborate workaround, the dream of a truly universal streaming menu is still puzzling.
